Biography

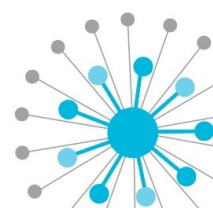

Since graduating in 1997, Sarah has worked in a variety of rehabilitation and hospital-based settings, as well as within the public, private and insurance sectors.

Her current area of practice centres on assessment, rehabilitation and case management for clients following brain injury and complex traumatic injuries, including severe orthopaedic injury, chronic pain and PTSD.

Sarah is highly skilled and experienced in neurological rehabilitation and has provided vocational rehabilitation intervention for the RETAKE research study of return to work after stroke .

Her experience of working in hospital and community settings in both the statutory and private sectors in England, Australia and New Zealand has helped Sarah develop an adaptable and bespoke approach when helping clients to achieve their goals after serious injury.

She is a strong communicator with a commitment to good quality regular reporting and contact with clients, professionals and stakeholders alike. She is confident working within the insurance and medico-legal sectors under claimant or joint instruction.
